

A fissure in classic modern politics opens a possibility of a new reflection

Abstract:

This paper attempts to outline a certain path to reveal fissures in modern political ideas, especially, the latent tension displayed in its primary conceptual domain: on the State and its institutions. Key theories by Esposito and Clastres are proposed in the attempt to find this path, allowing us to reexamine the modern conceptual language and to establish a "critical piece" in order to renew political thinking.

Key words: Modern philosophy, criticism, political anthropology, Clastres, Esposito.
